Hello Friends,

February...a month when we celebrate love. Despite being one of the most common words in the English language, Love is one of the hardest words to define and often one of the hardest emotions to give or receive. It brings the most steady and kind men to their knees and can start arguments, fights, and even wars. It seems that the ooey goey romantic love we celebrate today (though valid and beautiful) sits in stark contrast to something else we start this month...Lent. Ash Wednesday most often falls somewhere in this month of love (though not always) and this month it falls on February 14th. Ash Wednesday is a day that marks the beginning of Lent by causing us to remember our own mortality and our need for communion with God. As we light aromatic candles, eat heart shaped chocolates and celebrate the love in our lives, let us remember a different kind of love as well. A love that led to a cross.

Love you all 😊

Rev. Charissa
